A family business which is more than forty years old must have a very special ingredient as the foundation for its continued success. That ingredient is tradition - in our case, a tradition started by Charles Sabatelle, Sr. the first in 1930. "Sabatelle's produces the finest quality fresh meats, cured meats, hot or cold "prepared" foods and platters."

Webster's Dictionary provides an interesting insight into the meaning of "tradition". It's "the handing down of information, beliefs and customs by word of mouth or by example, from one generation to another, without written instruction."

Now we begin to see how Sabatelle's reputation for excellence evolved. It wasn't just the recipes or the curing and aging processes which passed from generation to generation, but the belief in and commitment to quality. Our immense pride in producing only the best, the finest products, is the true Sabatelle's tradition.
